POCAHONTAS.

An Indian Maiden and the History of Her Life.

There are few more interesting characters among the early Indians of America than Pocahontas, daughter of the famous chief Powhatan, who ruled over thirty tribes in Eastern Virginia when in 1607 the English colony of Jamestown was established. It may or it may not be true—the matter is controverted—whether she saved the life of Capt. John Smith, the famous explorer and founder of Virginia, when he was taken prisoner before her father at Werowocomoco (now Shelby, Gloucester County, Va.); but it is certain that afterward she saved the life of Smith and the party with him; that on many occasions she befriended the colonists, feeding them when starvation was staring them in the face, and that by her marriage to John Rolfe she turned the deep hatred of Powhatan against the colony of Jamestown to a deep friendship for the whites.

The story of how she is said to have saved the life of Smith at Werowocomoco is familiar almost to all. Smith's head was laid upon two blocks of stone and the Indians stood around with clubs ready to beat out his brains, when Pocahontas laid her own head on his to save his life. The chief spared Smith and the latter became an armor to Powhatan and a link-maker to Pocahontas. During Smith's captivity Pocahontas learned to love the white man and was initiated into some of the truths of Christianity. It was through her intercession with her father that Smith was allowed to return to the colony at Plymouth. Subsequently when starvation stared the colonists in the face Pocahontas with some of her people gave them corn and game, and when, in 1609, Powhatan laid a plot to murder Smith and others of the colonists, who had gone on an expedition far from Jamestown, it was the Indian maiden who gave them warning so that they escaped back to the shelter of their guns. For this she was persecuted by her father and she took shelter among the Potomac Indians. By these she was betrayed into the hands of the colonists who held her as a hostage for her father's misdeeds. Smith had meantime gone to England and upon the representation that he was dead she received the advances of another Englishman, John Rolfe. In the church at Jamestown, the tower of which still stands, she was baptized and named Rebecca and here soon afterward she was married to Rolfe. This marriage cemented peace between the two peoples and until his death Powhatan remained the friend of the white man. He never deigned to visit his daughter, however, though he sent her presents. In 1614 Pocahontas, with her husband, went to England and was presented at court. One day Capt. Smith, whom she loved and whom she believed dead, visited her. The meeting was a fatal blow to her happiness, and in 1617 while preparing to return to her native land she died at Gravesend.

THE USE OF PAPER MONEY.

Common to Nearly All Civilized Countries.

—Issue of Various Nations.

Almost, if not quite, all civilized countries use paper money to facilitate payments within their own jurisdictions, says the Globe-Democrat. The United States uses paper money to a greater extent than any other country, and in notes of smaller denomination than any other country of equal importance. All of our paper bills except the gold certificates are in the denominations of $1, $2, $5, $10, $20, $50, $100, $500 and $1,000, our gold certificates do not appear in denominations less than $20. The Dominion of Canada issue $1 and $2 notes and various banks issue notes varying from $5 to $1,000. Mexico issues paper money of 10 pesos and upward, and the South American states issue paper of similar denominations. The Bank of England issues all English notes of denominations of £5, £10, £25, £50, £100, £200, £500 and £1,000. The banks of Scotland and Ireland issue notes of £1 and upward. The Bank of France issues notes for 50 francs, 100, 200, 500 and 1,000. The Bank of Belgium issues notes of 20 francs and upward. Italian banks issue notes of 1 lira and upward to 1,000 lire. The Bank of China puts out notes for 5 marks and upward to 1,000 marks. Austria issues notes of 1 gulden and upward. Russia is the only European country which issues Government notes, its paper money being of the denomination of 1 ruble and upward. Sweden, Norway and Denmark issue by their banks notes for 5 krona, 10, 25, 50 and 100 krona. India does not issue paper money, nor does China now. Japan provides paper money of 1 yen, 2, 5, 10, 20 and 100 yens, and the other countries use a rule issue paper money, the lowest denomination of which is usually ten times the value of the coined unit of value.
